Eighty per cent of disasters in Indonesia are caused by climatic or hydrometeorological disasters. Disaster is defined as a serious disturbance caused by both natural and human factors and can paralyze the functions of society that are

3. Proses Hasil Review dari Paper

Hasil Review dikirimkan melalui email (22-04-2022)
Point yang perlu direvisi – Komentar dari Reviewer 1	The article needs some major revisions on the research methodology and the findings. The author fails to provide a thorough elaboration on every method selected for this research. The findings do not demonstrate the structured, organised answers for every method selected
Point yang perlu direvisi – Komentar dari Reviewer 2	As much as I feel this research is interesting, numerous issues need to be addressed <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - The abstract is too long, especially in terms of the description of the topics. Instead, the author(s) should focus on the essential findings and implications of the study in the abstract. - Data from Indonesian Disaster Information Data (DIBI)-BNPB is too old - period 2005-2015 - please replace with more current one considering this year is already 2022 - Please provide more references to support the statements. For example, this statement: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Indonesia's strategic geographical location has made it a centre of civilization, as well as containing natural potential that is dangerous and poses a risk of disaster. 2. As one of the largest Islamic civil society movements in Indonesia, Muhammadiyah has always cared about and involved itself in the humanitarian context. - Who said these? Similarly, many statements are without proper citation - Please rewrite the statements - Similar research that has one or several concepts can be described as follows; 1) Artificial Intelligence in Disaster Risk Communication: A Systematic Literature Review (Ogie, Rho, & Clarke, 2019), is a disaster risk communication study carried out with the SLR approach and only examines the technology used in disseminating disaster risk information. Similar to the research Earthquake Country: A Qualitative Analysis of Risk Communication via Facebook (Lambert, 2020), which emphasizes the use of Facebook to communicate disaster risk in Alaska.

- If none of the past studies research this topic, what is the author's significance for the author(s) to study this? Justify it properly.
- Please strengthen the literature review by adding more up-to-date pieces of literature
- What is the theory used for the study? Please include one.
- The methodology of the study is not clear and shallow. Please focus on explaining the interview as the method and exclude literature search and document reviews from the methods. Kindly justify the selection of samples for the study for the interviews. How do you decide the number of respondents, how do you form the questions, and what are the questions asked. Please refer to the past studies on how to write a good and proper methodology section.
- The discussion is too shallow. Instead, please include more deliberation about key findings and compare them with past studies and theories
- Please also provide a conclusion incorporating a study limitation and a recommendation for future research.
- As a whole, I observe that the paper needs great aides from an expert proofreader to improve the grammar, coherence, and structure
- Please read more research papers and improve the writing style that fits the journal writing style. This is more like a report than a research paper.
- I hope my comments could help develop a better manuscript that could bring a unique contribution to a growing body of scholarship. Thank you.
