*The Concept of a Roadmap to Returning to Increase the Adversity
Quotient of Street Punk Teenagers in Pondok Tasawuf Underground, South Tangerang*

ABSTRACT

Overcoming challenges in life is certainly not easy, this is also experienced by street punk teenagers who live on the streets because of their socio-economic conditions. The need for the Adversity Quotient (AQ) ability of punk teenagers to face the difficulties of their lives. One of the institutions that helps punk teenagers improve their AQ abilities is Pondok Sufism Underground. Therefore, this research aims to determine the process of job skills guidance in increasing the adversity quotient of street punk teenagers.

This research uses the LEAD method theory to determine the work skills guidance process coupled with measuring the AQ level of punk teenagers using the Adversity Response Profile questionnaire. This research uses descriptive qualitative research methods. The data collection technique was carried out using triangulation (combined), data analysis was qualitative. The results of this research concluded that job skills guidance for street punk teenagers at Pondok Tasawuf Underground was carried out using individual and group approaches. Pondok Sufism Underground is able to increase the AQ of punk teenagers through the concept of a road map home. However, in its implementation there are still obstacles, namely age factors, family factors, economic factors and disciplinary factors.
